Re: FDA Warning Letter(s) CBD "Hemp Products"

Today, Kingdom Harvest, learned from a local news outlet, that it was subject to a letter of warning from the FDA related to its line of CBD & Hemp products. To the best of our knowledge, no notification was sent to our offices; however, we have since obtained a copy of a letter.

We have been a pioneer company within the Hemp Industry since the legalization and removal of hemp from the Controlled Substances Act. Our products comply with federal and state guidelines and we are in the process of formulating a formal response to the FDA's stated position related to CBD and other Hemp derived products.

Our company has been an advocate for regulations within the fast growing Hemp Industry and it is our desire to continue to work within the parameters of both federal and state law. We have initial grave concern with the somewhat sweeping aspects of the letter and how the FDA's position complies with existing law.

Our company has taken great pains to bring CBD as well as other hemp derived products directly from the farm to our shelves. Numerous lab tests have been conducted both independently and via the Hemp Commission for the state of North Carolina. The goal of these tests is to confirm that our products comply with both state and federal law. Our concern is that if the FDA is taking the position that our products do not comply then most, if not all, of the collective Hemp Industry is non-compliant. We are hopeful that dialogue between our company and FDA will shed light on the fact of our steadfast compliance.
