Finding: Family Services Agreements were not completed timely and were not reflective of Strengths and Needs. Ongoing contacts with parents did not occur according to policy.

Applicable Rule/Law/Policy:

Permanency Planning Services must be provided to any child in the custody or placement responsibility of a county child welfare services agency. Reunification with the parents, guardians, or custodian from whom the child is removed must be the primary or secondary plan unless the juvenile court makes findings under G.S. 7B-901(c) or G.S. 7B-906.1(d)(3), that the permanent plan is or has been achieved, or the court makes written findings that reunification efforts clearly would be unsuccessful or would be inconsistent with the juvenile's health or safety.

When removal is necessary to preserve a child's safety and well-being, the county child welfare services agency must:

- Provide services to preserve or reunify families until the juvenile court has determined reunification would not meet the child's need for safety and permanency within a reasonable length of time;
- Ensure the child is in county child welfare custody for the shortest time possible;
- Provide family-centered services that are time limited and goal oriented; Complete a thorough assessment of the child and family's needs; and
- Provide careful planning prior to and throughout a child's placement. Ensuring a child's safety and working to achieve permanency must always be parallel functions.

Public Law 96-272, Adoption Assistance and Child Welfare Act of 1980 is one of the most significant federal laws shaping the provision of services to children needing foster care. The requirements of this law were developed to ensure that children do not linger unnecessarily in foster care placements. It also frames many requirements for receipt of federal Title IV-E funding.

Public Law 105-89, The Adoption and Safe Families Act of 1997, expands and clarifies the intent of P.L. 96-272. This legislation establishes unequivocally that
